Theft may rise with pump prices

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

While escalating fuel prices have shown their impact through various areas in the economy, in Didsbury there has been an unsettling trend at the pumps themselves.

According to Aleta Hawkins, manager of Fas Gas in Didsbury, the business has seen nine drive-aways (pumping gas without paying) over a four day-span last week. When the business first opened, she says one drive-away a month was

"It's hard to control, because you get busy and can't be watching everyone out at the pump," she said.

When asked about high fuel prices connecting to an increased chance of theft, Didsbury RCMP Cst. Derek Lascelles said, "The possibility definitely exists. I cannot say that we have received an increased number of calls related to gas n' dash type incidents, but many go unreported if they are the ten and twenty dollar variety."

Lascelles says there are a few ways in which gas stations can apply the brakes to stolen gas incidents.

"Cameras for one. Especially if they are well-placed, high-quality cameras that can take a clear picture of a license plate," he said.

"Also, although it is inconvenient for the customer, shutting pumps off and forcing the client to pay for their fuel prior to pumping would help, and could very well be the way of the future should prices continue to rise."

Hawkins says she will be speaking to her territory manager about the Didsbury location getting an extra set of cameras.

Younggyu Gwak of Hi Ho Gas and Grocery in Didsbury says they have not noticed an increase in gas theft, but are concerned that if fuel prices continue to rise, that the possibility is there.

Didsbury Esso owners have also confirmed not yet seeing gas theft as a problem for their business.

At press time, the area gas price was 1.32.

Students urged to be tolerant of others

BY DAN SINGLETON
Didsbury Review

The Chinook's Edge School Division says its programs promoting tolerance among students are working well, with students at all grade levels given regular instruction on character development.

The Hate Crime In Canada study, released by Statistics Canada last week, has found that youths now account for more than one-third of all persons accused of hate crimes in Canada.

"We certainly do have programs that promote tolerance," said Chinook's Edge deputy superintendent Heather Henderson-Hill. "We look at character education, we look at leadership and developing leadership with students. We have close relationships with other agencies and other partners in terms of justice. We try to be proactive."

"If we feel there are issues that may be coming up, we try to put programs in place. I'm not aware of any specific issues that would relate to intolerance because of race, ethnicity or sexual orientation that has been brought to me at this time."

Chinook's Edge operates 40 schools, including in Olds, Innisfail, Didsbury, Carstairs, Sundre and Cremona.

Half of all hate-motivated crimes reported by police were property-related offences, while one-third were violent offences such as assaults, according to the new study.

Of the 502 reported incidents motivated by race or ethnicity, half were targeted against Blacks, 13 percent at South Asians, and 12 per cent at Arabs or West Asians.

Of 220 hate crimes reported to be motivated by religion, two-thirds were against the Jewish faith, 21 per cent against Muslims, and six per cent against Catholics.

Hate crimes against homosexuals were most likely to result in physical injury to the victim.

Police-reported data showed that young people aged 12 to 17 were more likely than those in older age groups to be accused of hate crimes, with 38 per cent of all persons accused being youths.

Male youths were two and a half times more likely than females to be the victims of violent, hate-motivated incidents. The rate for males was 1.8 per 100,000 population, compared with 0.7 for females.

Calgary had the highest reported incidents of hate crimes anywhere in Canada.

Low-flush toilets a go

Rebates to save money for residents, town

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

The Town of Didsbury has announced a new initiative that will result in less water flowing through its sewer system.

A new low-flush toilet rebate program which will involve a $50 credit for each purchase, is in place for toilets picked up after May 15 of this year.

"From a town perspective, the reason for going forward with this rebate, is if we can reduce the amount of water being flushed down toilets, which is probably the biggest use in a household, it means less water going through our sewer system and less that we need to treat," said Mayor Brian Wittal.

"...long-term for the town, this can certainly mean savings, if we don't have to build new sewer lagoons due to reducing what we're putting through them."

Corinna van Dyck of Didsbury Home Hardware says low-flush toilets are presently in its warehouse and expected to arrive in the store this Friday.

Van Dyck says, with the new rebate, the low-flush product will be the most inexpensive of the toilets her store sells.

"I think it's a great idea. It saves water. If the town wants to pitch in a little bit to promote that, I think that's a positive," she said, adding that she expects there to be a lot of interest in the program.

"That seems to be the way things are going. Everyone is more concerned about this type of thing and becoming more aware."

According to a release by the town, the process of securing the rebate includes: purchasing a toilet from the list of eligible toilets on the town's application form; the customer retains the bill, indicating the type of toilet purchased; a photo is provided of the former toilet in an unusable condition; and that toilet rebates are available on a first-come, first-served basis until the rebate fund account is spent, among others.

According to the town, rebates received after the funds are spent will be held for rebate, pending future funding.

Playing politics with crime legislation

BY DAN SINGLETON
Didsbury Review

Prime Minister Harper has renewed his call for tougher penalties for criminals of all ages, urging the opposition parties to help his government pass legislation he says will stop the coddling of criminals while making streets and homes safer.

In particular Harper is calling on the Liberals to let him push through four pieces of crime legislation:

- Mandatory sentences for serious drug offences including those committed for the benefit of organized crime and those involving the use or threat of violence.
- Three new Criminal Code offences to stem the rising tide of identity theft.
- Measures aimed at organized auto theft rings.
- Amendments to the Youth Criminal Justice Act making it easier to detain young offenders who pose a risk to public safety.

"Our government's approach to criminal justice is fundamentally different from our predecessors'. We believe the central purpose of a criminal justice system is not the welfare of the criminal, but the protection of law-abiding citizens and their property," Harper told the Canadian Crime Victims Foundation.

"Our government has no intention of allowing young criminals to avoid punishment and evade responsibility. Anyone who presents a serious threat to public safety should be held fully accountable for his or her actions."

While no law-abiding Canadian would argue with the need to control and, if possible, reduce criminal activities in Canada's cities and towns, the timing of the prime minister's call for opposition cooperation seems somewhat curious.

That is, at the exact same time as he is asking the Liberals, NDP and Bloc to cooperate with his crime agenda, the prime minister and his party have launched a nation-wide ad campaign aimed at discrediting Liberal leader Stéphane Dion.

The ads – which are running on TVs and radios across the country – basically call Dion an incompetent leader who would increase taxes for all Canadians if he were elected.

If Mr. Harper was serious about wanting opposition support for his crime agenda, the new attack ads seem to fly in the face of his call for all-party cooperation.

Do the Tories really expect the Liberals to get onboard with their anti-crime legislation in the face of the new ad campaign aimed at the their leader? It wouldn't be surprising if Stéphane Dion is asking himself these days, with friends like these who needs enemies?

Getting his crime legislation passed would be a public relations victory for Prime Minister Harper. Yet in light of the new attack ads, it would be very, very surprising if the Liberals do anything but continue to fight his plans tooth and nail.

MARK LAYCOCK
Didsbury Review

Gas prices make me think bike

With drastically higher gas prices, come drastic measures.

As a reporter, my car is an invaluable piece of machinery. On a daily basis I'm motoring through town and heading down the highway en route to my next story.

However, with gas prices hitting the $1.30 mark, I find myself cringing ever so slightly as I stand at the pump, listening to my hard-earned cash flow into the gas tank of my little Honda Civic.

The other day I could have sworn my wallet felt dramatically lighter even before I went in to pay. Not only that, but I swear I heard the faint sound of Saudi Arabia laughing at me.

It really is a disconcerting feeling, listening to that dial tick away as the dollar amount steadily increases. In fact the other day I was thinking about filling the cab with gas and setting it on fire.

Surely the insurance reparations could buy me a nifty scooter with a bell, basket and super cool reflective orange flag?

However, I'm forced to think more logically, and legally, and I've come to a reasonable solution to my gas woes: two-wheeled, pedal powered propulsion vehicle, better known as the bicycle.

I will note that my little Civic only costs me about $90 a month, however two years ago it was costing me about $50 a month.

There are of course, numerous individuals in town pumping out $90 a week on gas—but it's safe to say we're all feeling the hit.

I have established a goal for myself: cut my gas bill in half by the end of July. This goal of course is dependant on fluctuations in gas prices.

I have traditionally thought of myself as a mild environmentalist, which is why it's interesting that this pollution free endeavour has nothing to do with greenhouse gases or the environment.

For some, saving $45 a month isn't much to look forward to, however in the long run, those savings amount to $540 a year.

If a typical lottery ticket costs about $3, then I'll have saved up enough money to purchase 180 lottery tickets for one draw—how can I lose?

So over the course of the next month and a half—pending acceptable weather conditions—residents of Didsbury should see their local media person, Josh Skapin and I navigating our towns via motorless motor coach.

It'll surely be an adjustment. But as soon as I can hook up some speakers and my iPod to my handlebars, put a baseball card in the spokes to make cool motorcycle sounds and hang a pair of fuzzy dice it'll be like old times again.

I invite other readers to do the same, not only for your bank book, but for the environment as well. My camera and I will be on the hunt for residents biking to work, sporting events and clubs.

ANIMAL CONTROL OFFICER

With our rapid growth, Didsbury is getting busier everyday and Municipal Enforcement is no exception. We are experiencing an increasing number of complaints as well as higher traffic volumes. To help us deal with these complaints and maintain a high level of service to the community we have contracted Alberta Animal Services to patrol the town and respond to all animal complaints as well as general bylaw complaints. Ryan Anderson from Alberta Animal Service will be the officer assigned to Didsbury and will be patrolling the town 5 days per week. Ryan has an extensive enforcement background and a keen interest in animal control. I will share the general bylaw duties and concentrate on traffic enforcement around town. The Alberta Animal Services site in Red Deer will be housing all strays that are found in Didsbury. They use cutting edge software to reunite pet owners with their pets. The software is internet based and lost pets can be viewed and reported at this web address www.petlynx.net. You also have the opportunity to pre-register your pet on the system then if it is ever lost you can report it lost online and you will receive email updates from every facility that uses this system when they receive an animal matching the description of yours. Of course, our licensing program is still the best way to be reunited with your pet quickly and Ryan will be spending a great deal of his time ensuring that the pet licensing bylaws are adhered to. If you do not have your pets licensed I would encourage you to do that as soon as possible. Spayed or Neutered pets can be licensed for $15.00 per year and unaltered pets are $30.00 per year. If you would like to get in touch with Ryan please do so by phoning the main office at 335-3391.

AIDS devastation sparks African fundraising campaign

MARK LAYCOCK
Didsbury Review

For most in Canada, a trip to the optometrist is a regular part of a yearly routine, and a new pair of glasses might only be purchased for aesthetic purposes.

Access to medical care has the same impression: it's available for those in need, when they need it.

However, in South Africa, an entire generation of children and teens are growing up without parents, and without access to adequate medical care.

The devastation of HIV/AIDS in the region has almost eliminated an entire generation of people. With them goes the country's history and well-being, as well as the future prospects of the many children who are left abandoned on the streets.

Carstairs resident, Mary Allen Speers has seen first hand the conditions present in the ailing country.

Speers, a registered nurse at the Rocky View Hospital in Calgary, recently attended a mission with the Samaritan's Purse organization to South Africa and Angola where she worked with doctors and nurses in remote areas of the countries to provide basic health and eye care to those in need.

While there, she couldn't help but notice the many children in need of a guardian and the many grandmothers who are in urgent need of support to raise their grandchildren.

In response, she and three other women: Lynn Martens, and Gail Browning of Carstairs, both registered nurses at the Didsbury Hospital, and Jean Whittaker of Didsbury have become participants in the Grandmothers to Grandmothers program, which brings much needed support to grandmothers in troubled areas of Africa.

"A lot of the people have zero health care, like in Angola 70 per cent of people won't have access to a physician," says Speers.

"When we were in Angola, we met lots of families that had no males alive and grandmothers (were) looking after their children because their parents died from HIV/AIDS."

Fellow group member Jean Whittaker said the group of women is looking to increase the size of their group and hopefully hold a large fundraiser at least once a year and send all the funds to the grandmothers campaign.

"We're hoping to circulate all the libraries and the museums and the organizations so everyone knows what we're talking about," says Whittaker.

During the '70s, Whittaker spent three years in Zambia, where she witnessed the tragic events unfolding in the troubled continent; it hasn't yet faded from her mind.

"Once you get bit by the Africa bug, you can't let go," she said.

Speers said that four years ago, two nurses from her hospital attended a mission to Malawi where they distributed glasses to residents, and worked in local hospitals.

"When they went there, they had such a great time and they wanted to go again," said Speers.

Drawing inspiration from her co-workers,

Speers joined a mission to Mexico where she helped perform vision tests and medical care.

The mission was also done Samaritan's Purse, a non-denominational Christian international relief organization.

Westerdale Heat certainly heated up the Didsbury Squirts girls' team last weekend when they brought home gold. This is the first year for the Squirts girls' team, ages 10-12, to play together as a team. In fact, most of the players are first year players. Yet that did not stop them as they won all five games in the two day tournament, as well as winning the Skills Competition on Saturday.

Town to alleviate congestion along 20th Avenue

In an effort to alleviate some of the congestion on 20th Avenue by the Post Office and the Bakery, the Town is making some changes that will affect traffic and parking in the area.

It is hoped that the following changes will improve the availability of temporary parking for mail pick up as well as adding much needed space for handicap parking. The following changes will be made prior to the end of June;

1. A 15-minute parking zone will be created on the South side of 20 Avenue from the West side of the Post Office to the gravel parking lot.

2. The Handi-Bus parking stall will be moved several stalls west along the South side of 20 Avenue, but will still be to the East of the Post Office. The purpose of this is to improve site lines at the intersection of 20 Avenue and 20 Street when the Handi-Bus is present.

3. The current Handi-Bus stall at 20 Avenue and 20 Street will remain as a general handicap parking zone.

4. The No Parking yellow zone on the Southwest corner of 20 Avenue at 21 Street will be extended to improve site lines at this intersection.

Tyke Chargers wrap up season

The 2008 Didsbury Chargers tyke lacrosse team was made up of a good mix of returning veterans and new recruits. Veterans were #3 Josh Vanderstoop, #5 Kaleb Brander, #6 Corson Waiting, #7 Ella Schindel, #9 Hunter Nelson, #10 Joey Dick, #15 Koby Brander, #16 Caleb Schindel and #17 Jett Laveck. New to lacrosse were #11 Russel Rabchak, #12 Justin Carpenter, #13 Eryk Dirks, #14 Riley Molander, #19 William Jensen and #20 Tyler Chomyn. Each game brought new opportunities for the players to show their skills. "Bulldog" Ella, "fearless" Joey and "Iron" Riley, would lay crushing blows as "relentless" Russel and "mighty" William would fight for the ball. "Lightning" Josh and "flash" Kaleb would race for pinpoint passes from "sharp shooter" Corson and Eagle Eye Hunter. Opponents soon learned to fear the moves of Spin master Jett and "tricky" Tyler as they left opponents in their dust. No defense could stand up to Justin "the wall" and Eryk "the enforcer" as they cleared the way for "rocket" Koby and "cool hand" Caleb to move in for the score. Together we all had a great season. Here is to the 2008 tyke Chargers.
